

The Night Drawer Legacy

#1 "one flight down"

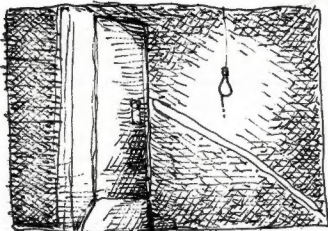

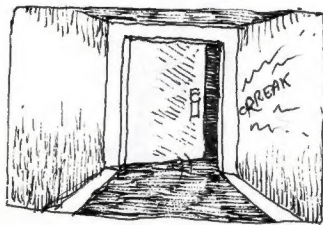

A Plot over extended their schedule by having four consecutive flights in a row. They finished the first flight & said, "one flight down". In the night drawer the punchline is not a joke but a contrived series of events ending in the phrase that is the prompt. The night drawer is a collaborative drawing zone created by the night drawers on Sundays At Seven. Anyone can participate especially YOU! Each week the prompt is drawn from the little night drawer then the drawers draw the drawings that was drawn from the drawer. This weeks prompt is "one flight down" there are flying flights & flights of stairs. flights of drinks & flights of fancy fit into the stairs category. The flights of drinks started with wine then beer. Now they have flights of coffee & that new ice cream truck has ice cream flights - food & drink flights are good because sometimes you want to sample all the flavors of wine but not get fully wasted or you can use it as an excuse for "accidentally" getting wasted. With ice cream it seems like one taste would be enough because its not going to fill you up but there is the portion you want to keep eating. Are people really enjoying the flavor of wine or is it an elaborate excuse to get drunk but be fancy? Also some people are upstairs on the stairs so the downstairs people are one or more flights down.
